

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An inverted PCRAM cell is formed by plating the bottom electrode, made of copper for example, with a conductive material, such as silver. Chalcogenide material is disposed over the plated electrode and subjected to a conversion process so that ions from the plated material 5 diffuse into the chalcogenide material.